Municipal Election.

The Municipal Election in this city for Mayor and members of the city council took place yesterday. There was very little excitement about it and but a small number of votes cast.

There were three regular candidates in the field and the present able Mayor, Bradford Harlow, Esq. the regular nominated candidate of the Whigs, was elected by a handsome majority, as will be seen by the following table:

Ward	Harlow	Pillsbury	Wiggin	Seat
1	53	14	11	3
2	92	10	12	2
3	71	25	11	1
4	72	23	14	7
5	104	22	25	1
6	73	15	10	1
7	51	23	9
	516	143	92	13

The whole number of ballots cast was 782. Of this number Bradford Harlow received 516, being a majority over all others of 250, and there were sixteen persons that did not vote for Mayor, although their votes count against the votes of Mr Harlow.

Ward Officers.

It will be seen that the Ward Officers and the members of the City Council, are all Whigs, with four exceptions, marked with a * Two only in the City Council.

It will be seen that all the interests of the city are well represented in the City Council, there being 9 Merchants, 8 Mechanics, 1 Farmer, 4 Lawyers and 6 Miscellaneous.

To the Editor of the Daily Whig
Boston, March 11, 1842
On board the "Dulcorno"

Presuming some particulars from a passenger in the Caladonia will be acceptable, I send the following from a former citizen of Bangor.

The Caladonia encountered one of the most terrific gales, from the West ever known. It commenced Feb. 8th, four days from Liverpool, and raged with increasing fury until the 12th. Carried away the bulwarks fore and aft, the Ice House, stove in the wheel-house and paddle boxes, and filled the fore cabin with four feet of water, from which the passengers were rescued by the officers and men, and brought into the main cabin. The fore cabin was then battered down and secured. The berths in the aft cabin were likewise drenched, and several inches of water on the floor. The ship was kept head to it, the sea making repeated breakers over her. Friday 4th, during the height of the gale the adder gave way! For the last 24 hours we were barely able to steer its fury and hold our ground. Hope was almost gone. Ineffectual attempts were made to repair the rudder with chains and bolts, and with sails to keep her head to the gale. We had made about 1000 miles, westing in 8 days. The Captain and Officers now determined as the only chance left, to run the hazard of wearing ship and scudding before it. Several trials were made. On getting half round she 'broached to' and the seas swept her. After two hours of imminent danger of losing the fire, and swamping, the ship was finally at 8 o'clock, P. M. scudding before the gale. The storm still raged with fearful fury, the seas threatening to send us down head first, the ship playing at an angle of 45 degrees. When the first sea struck us, the chief Engineer who was standing at the door, was hurled together with it, down into the engine. Friday night three phosphoric balls of fire were seen one on each mast head, remaining several minutes. Arrived at Cork, Tuesday 15th, and at Liverpool the 17th. The 'Acadia' was despatched Saturday 19th.

Arrived at Halifax, March 7, at midnight, (amid the roaring of cannon, shooting of rockets, and shouts of the citizens) making the passage in sixteen and a half days, against severe westerly gales, snow storms, and through fields of floating ice. When the 'Acadia' was 40 miles from Halifax, sending up rockets for a pilot, the 'Unicorn' being on the way to England, although twenty miles distant from us, answered our signals, and the two ships bore towards each other. The thrilling question, 'Is that the Caladonia?' brought tears into many an eye. We went into Halifax together. We were now transferred to the 'Unicorn,' and left Halifax the 8th, at midnight, experienced another severe gale on the 9th, and put into a harbor near Cape Sable, for the night. Arrived safe in Boston harbor the 11th March, being thirty-five days since leaving Liverpool, in the 'Caladonia.' At Halifax, several passengers took the 'Clyde,' West India steamer, for New York. She sailed 12 hours before the 'Unicorn.' The Caladonia had sixty-six passengers, among them Mr. Power, son of the vocalist Tyrone Power, (who was lost in the President,) and nine ladies. These ships have proved admirable sea boats, and the machinery has, in no instance, failed in the most trying moment.

Colonial Trade.

Mr. Editor. I was pleased to notice the proceedings of a meeting held at Lubec, a short time since, for the purpose of calling the attention of Congress to the trade of the United States with the British North American and West India Colonies. I understand a memorial from Portland has been presented to Congress upon the same subject. The want of reciprocity in this trade is exceedingly prejudicial to the commercial, lumbering, and agricultural interests of this State. Under the arrangement which Mr. McLane couched the British government to make with us, in 1830, in regard to this trade, our provincial neighbors are introducing into our principal ports, their cord-wood, hay, potatoes, and many other articles which we export from Maine, thus proving peculiarly injurious to our producers of similar articles, as well as depriving our co-producers of much of the business which belongs to them. It is, also, by this arrangement, that British vessels, proceeding from England to the West Indies, depending as they do, in a great measure, on their outward cargoes, and paying no higher charges in our ports than our own ships, can return to England by the way of New Orleans, or some other southern port, and afford to underbid American ships in the cotton trade. It may be supposed we derive some benefit from an arrangement which confers so much upon our great commercial rival. I conceive we have derived none worth naming. The British West India ports have indeed been nominally opened to our vessels, upon paying the same tonnage duties as their own, but England reserved to herself the right of laying discriminating duties in favor of the productions of her North American colonies, imported into those islands in her own ships. A right our government never conceded to them, till the present arrangement was made reserving to herself this right. She soon after this arrangement was concluded, increased her discriminating duties, as to amount to a virtual prohibition of our lumber, fish, &c. thus not only depriving us of all the advantages we expected to derive from this trade, but preventing us from supplying her islands through St. Thomas, and the other neutral islands, as we had before done. My object in referring to this question, is not so much to enlighten your readers upon a subject with which their interests should have made them familiar, as to suggest the propriety of the citizens of Bangor uniting with those of other parts of the State in memorializing Congress upon the evils we are suffering from this arrangement, and asking that this colonial trade be placed upon a footing of reciprocity.

Foreign News.

We give to-day more extended extracts from the news received by the late steam packet. Much of it is highly important.

Lords Aberdeen had his final audience of the Queen, previous to his departure, on Saturday, the 5th ult. when he was presented by Lord Aberdeen.

Parliament was opened by a speech from the Queen, Feb. 3. On the 9th of February Sir Robert Peel brought forward the ministerial project for the amendment of the Corn Laws. It proposes a very important change and reduction of the rate of duty, though it is far from being satisfactory to the free trade party. The vote was taken Feb. 16th, the original motion was supported by 349 votes, the amendment by 226.

A new tariff was proposed in Parliament, making important changes in the duties on imports into the North American Colonies, and West Indies.

The papers are much occupied by the festivities in honor of the King of Prussia, and other distinguished personages, and the baptism of the Prince of Wales.

On Thursday the 3d ult. the Queen proceeded in state to open the Session of Parliament.

The Mutineers of the Creole.

In the House of Lords Feb. 14, there was a long debate on the question of surrendering for trial the negro mutineers of the Creole. The following is the substance of the debate, which we take from the Morning Chronicle.

Lord Brougham brought before their lordships the case of the Creole. In reply to his questions,

The Earl of Aberdeen informed the House that communications had taken place between the Government of the Bahamas and Her Majesty's Government on the subject. Her Majesty's Government had given the subject their most anxious attention, and had satisfied themselves that there is no existing authority for bringing the negroes of the Creole to trial for mutiny and murder, still less for delivering them up of detaining them in custody. The Secretary for the Colonies, Lord Stanley, had therefore sent out instructions for their release.

Lord Denman gave his opinion, that there was no law, authority, or machinery existing by which the Secretary of State for the Colonies could deliver up these men to a foreign power, after taking refuge in our dominions; and he declared, on the authority of the most eminent lawyers, that the Secretary of State so delivering up such men to a foreign State would be liable to the danger of an action of damages for false imprisonment, and the still more awful danger of putting a person upon his trial in a case where the punishment was death. It was perfectly clear that an alien seized in this country for an alleged crime committed in a foreign country might resist his apprehension with force, and if the resistance cost him his life, the seizing party, might be arrested for murder, and, if found guilty, executed. It was desirable that an international jurisdiction should be established by treaty, but the existence of the slave trade stood in the way.

Lord Campbell, Lord Cottenham, and the Lord Chancellor, concurred in Lord Denman's statement of the law, and Lord Brougham stated that Lords Wynford and Abinger had authorized him to express their assent to the same opinion.

Lord Brougham then withdrew his motion, and the House adjourned.

General Case, our Minister at the Court of France, has published at Paris a pamphlet, entitled an examination of the question now in discussion between the American and British Governments, concerning the right of search. The London Times has a long commentary upon it. It admits that it is temperately worded, but considers the publication as designed to prevent the French Ministers from signing the treaty for the right of reciprocal search.

The Queen's baby has been christened 'Albert Edward' and it is said behaved as Princecy as any body's baby.

The Niger Expedition.

The papers contain certain and full accounts of the results of this disastrous Expedition. The officers of the Expedition have succeeded in forming treaties for the suppression of the slave trade, with the most powerful Chiefs, and have established a 'Model Farm' above the confluence, in what is supposed a healthy situation. Capt. Trotter had returned to England on account of his ill-health.

From India and China.

The news by the overland mail, which is from Bombay to Jan. 1, and from China to Nov. 14, is of great interest. In Cabul the British forces had suffered a serious disaster, in a sudden outbreak, in which Sir Alexander Burnes, and several other officers were killed. A rumor of this event was received by the previous mail, but it was not credited.

In China, the British expedition had met with uninterrupted success. They had recaptured Chusan, notwithstanding it had been fortified with great labor since its recent occupation by them, and had also taken the city of Chusan, and Ningpo. The following is a brief account of these operations, which commenced with the attack upon Chusan.

On the 1st of October, the troops were landed in two columns, one column at a time. At half past ten in the morning, the first column, 1,500 strong, effected a landing under a heavy fire of galleys and matchlocks from the heights, and proceeded, under cover of a smart fire from the ships and the British battery, to attack the Chinese on a hill, where they carried everything before them, although the Chinese made a more resolute stand than had been done in any previous encounter. The joss-house battery was soon silenced. Although the second column was landed as soon as the boats could return for it, the Chinese abandoned the western end of their sea-defences before it could be got on shore, and the troops of the first column entered the batteries, and took possession of the joss-house hill. The steamboats moved into the inner harbor, the troops rapidly advanced on the city; the walls were escaladed without opposition, and by two o'clock in the afternoon, the British colors were flying in every direction. The thirty six new and well-cast guns were taken in the batteries, and a considerable Government store of rice was found in the city. On the British side, one ensign, one private soldier, and one seaman were killed, and twenty-four private soldiers and two sailors were wounded. In a circular to British subjects in China, dated the 2d October, Sir Henry Pottinger says:

'Arrangements will be made immediately for establishing a provincial government, and her Majesty's Plenipotentiary deems it advisable, after what has already happened, to intimate to her Majesty's subjects and all others, that under no circumstances will Tinghai and its dependencies be restored to the Chinese Government, until the whole of the demands of England are not only complied with, but carried into full effect.'

On the 7th, the troops re-embarked, and the squadron re-ward the anchorage off Just in the way. A. and General Gough and Admiral Parker, accompanied by Sir Henry, proceeded to reconquer Chusan. The city of Chusan, says Sir William Parker, 'which is enclosed by a wall thirty-four feet high, with an embasured parapet of four feet high and nearly two miles in circumference, is situated at the foot of a very commanding peninsular height, which forms the entrance of the Tachoo (or Ningpo) river, on its left or north bank. On the summit is the citadel, which, from its strong position, is considered the key to Chusan, and the large and opulent city of Ningpo, about fifteen miles up the river, and it is so important as a military post, that I trust I may be excused for attempting to describe it. It stands about two hundred and fifty feet above the sea, and is encircled also by a strong wall, with very substantial iron-plated gates at the east and west ends. The north and south sides of the height are exceeding steep, the former accessible only from the sea by a narrow winding path from the rocks at its base, the south side and eastern end being nearly precipitous. The main body of the Chinese forces were posted on the right bank of the river, in fortified encampment, on very commanding and steep hills, field-works and entrenchments being thrown up in every advantageous position, with twenty-three guns and innumerable gungals mounted in them, to impede the advance of the troops. The principal landing-place on this side, is within a considerable creek, close to the south entrance of the river, and across this creek we found a row of piles driven. The attack on the citadel and city was assigned to the naval branch of the force, and on the evening of the 9th, all the vessels were in position. The troops were landed on the right at an early hour on the morning of the 10th, in two columns, one, 500 strong at the mouth of the creek, the other, about 1,000 strong, some thirteen hundred yards below it. Every man was safely landed by half past nine; and by eleven the Chinese troops were fleeing in all directions. At a quarter past eleven the walls of the city were breached by the fire from the ships, and the place was soon after in the possession of the B. A. The loss of the Chinese is supposed to be very great. Of all the British forces, about five were killed and thirty wounded.'

The Senatorial Apportionment Bill was again taken up and an amendment which was rejected yesterday in relation to the County of Franklin adopted. The adoption of this amendment was probably one of the results of the action of the loco caucus last evening. Mr. Washburn of Orono, made a strong speech against the resolves to which Mr. Abbott replied. They were then laid on the table and the House adjourned.

P. S. By the report of the Congressional Committee the State is divided into eight districts, and if Congress should decide on a ratio of population which would give us a less or greater number than a general ticket system is provided, as it is altogether probable that the number will be less than eight, we are in a fair way of having the general ticket system.
